Guy Adami

One of the Original “Fast Money Five” on CNBC’s Fast Money & Veteran Financial Services Leader

One of the most credible and captivating authorities on the economy today, Guy Adami surveys the U.S. and global economic landscape and shares his expert, no-holds-barred assessment of how market trends will impact your business or industry now, and in the future.

From Goldman Sachs, where he was once head gold trader, to ascending the media elite to become one of the original “Fast Money Five” on CNBC’s Fast Money, Guy is the quintessential “Wall Street Warrior,” as described by The New York Times. A charismatic media analyst and financial services veteran, he now serves as chief market strategist and director of advisor advocacy for Private Advisor Group, a nationwide network of leading financial advisors.

An independent trader and champion for independent financial advice, Guy has held high-level leadership positions with some of the top financial companies in the world, including CIBC World Markets, AIG International Inc., Drexel Burnham Lambert, and Goldman Sachs, which he joined in 1996 as one of the many proprietary traders within the Fixed Income Currency and Commodity division.

From global trade, job growth, tariffs, and inflation to demographic shifts and technological change, Guy revs up audiences and leaves a lasting impression as he helps them understand how the ever-changing flow of the market impacts their business. One of the most seasoned, trusted, and personable financial analysts in the field, his incisive breakdown of developing economic conditions gives organizations a competitive advantage in the U.S. and global marketplace.