

BILL CLEMENT

Two-Time NHL Stanley Cup Champion and Television Broadcaster

Bill Clement is a two-time Stanley Cup Champion with the Philadelphia Flyers (formerly the Broad Street Bullies) and critically acclaimed author, speaker, actor, entrepreneur, and broadcaster. A former National Hockey League all-star, he played 11 years in the NHL with Philadelphia Flyers, the Washington Capitals, and the Flames, both in Atlanta and Calgary. He has been the face and the voice of nationally-televised hockey since 1986, and he can be heard regularly on XM Satellite Radio, as well as NHL Radio. His acting credits include work on the ABC daytime drama All My Children and more than 250 television ads. In a customizable talk, he addresses leadership, sharing insider hockey stories, as well as personal anecdotes from his career.

Notable Author. Clement recently authored EveryDay Leadership: Crossing Gorges on Tighropes to Success with a foreword by Wayne Gretzky. In this inspirational autobiography, Clement calls on readers to seize all leadership opportunities and transform the way they look at leadership as a whole. He recounts many of his successes but is also brutally honest about his failures and having to rebuild success after financial and emotional defeat.

NHL Analyst. Bill Clement has worked for ESPN, NBC, ABC, Versus, Comcast SportsNet, and TNT in the U.S., and CTV, CBC, Rogers Sportsnet, and Sirius-XM Radio in Canada. He has worked every Stanley Cup Final telecast since 1986. On the Versus Network, he was the studio host for the NHL on NBC and for Hockey Central. For 15 years, he was the lead game-analyst for ESPN's extensive schedule of National Hockey Night telecasts. He also worked select games on ESPN2 and, from 2000–2004, served as the lead analyst for ABC Sports' NHL telecasts. From 1999–2005, he did play-by-play for ESPN's Great Outdoor games. He was the host of ESPN's Bassmaster Classic, was a guest host on Cold Pizza, and has worked as the studio analyst for CTV's coverage of the Canada Cup. His voice continues to be heard on EA Sports' NHL video games.

Hockey History. The former center began his professional hockey career with the Philadelphia Flyers, and he won two Stanley Cup championships with the Broad Street Bullies. He then moved to Washington and after one season with the Capitals, in which he played in his first NHL All-Star Game, was traded to the Atlanta Flames. He played there for five seasons and was selected to his second All-Star Game. In 1980, he moved with the Flames to Calgary, where he finished his career in 1982. Clement also has a street in his hometown of Thurso, Quebec, named after him. He won a Cable "ACE" Award as the best analyst in any sport, and he was voted "Favorite Hockey Personality on TV" by readers of The Hockey News in 1996.

Olympic-Caliber Commentator. Bill Clement has been an integral part of the televising of five Olympiads. In 1992, he served as a game analyst for both TNT TV's and CBS Radio's hockey coverage at the Winter Olympics in Albertville, France. At the 2002 Salt Lake City Winter Olympics, he was NBC's studio analyst for hockey. At the 2006 Torino, Italy, Winter Olympics, Clement was NBC's host for all hockey coverage. He shifted gears during the 2004 and 2008 Summer Olympics in Athens and Beijing, working for NBC as an expert analyst for badminton and table tennis and as a play-by-play man for the modern pentathlon.
